Housewife Unhurt by Computers

"Home economics is one field where the individual is successfully holding out against mechanization and the computer," Mrs. Lenore Eisenstein, home economics instructor at Los Angeles Harbor College, said in commenting on expanding opportunities for women.

"To prepare a person to be a more efficient homemaker is still the main part of the program, but we find that we are specializing more in preparing for specific jobs and the number of these jobs is constantly increasing."

As examples of current national programs increasing the need for specially trained women Mrs. Eisenstein cited the War on Poverty program and the Head Start projects.

THE WAR on Poverty has uncovered a need for women trained in home management, clothing, construction, food preparation and nutrition to conduct classes in these subjects for low income families.

She also indicated that the Head Start program that trains preschool children from culturally deprived families needs many people trained in nursery school education.

Harbor College has recently expanded its home economics and nursery school education classes. Many of the home economics courses fulfill general education requirements for students continuing on to a four-year college.

FOR THOSE students interested in business or merchandising, home economics courses in Textiles, Interiors, Costume Selection and Clothing Construction can be combined with art and business courses to prepare them for careers as fashion designers, home furnishing consultants, fashion consultants or buyers.

These courses are tuition free to California residents who are high school graduates or are at least 18 years of age. Deadline for filing a request for a permit to register at the admissions office at Harbor College is Jan. 21.
